The March flood outlook continues to suggest the risk of widespread major flooding remains low to moderate across most of the province, with a moderate risk of some overland flooding in low-lying areas along the Red and Assiniboine Rivers, Infrastructure Minister Ron Schuler announced today.

After the storm earlier this month, the risk of major flooding remains low on the Red and Assiniboine Rivers, but there is a moderate risk of some overland or overbank flooding,” said Schuler. “Levels along the Red River and the Assiniboine River are forecasted to remain below flood protection levels.”

The use of flood management infrastructure will now include the Red River Floodway under normal and unfavourable weather conditions. PTH 75 is expected to remain open throughout the spring.

The Province in conjunction with Rm of Ritchots Emergency Managers will continue to monitor the situation.
